Wolseley Canada appoints Commercial Business Development Manager for Central Canada

BURLINGTON, ON – Wolseley Canada recently appointed Barry Mouldale to the position of Commercial Regional Business Development Manager, effective July 27, 2009. Mouldale will report to Paul Kennedy, the company's Vice President, Ontario.

Mouldale will be responsible for growing Wolseley's overall commercial business within Ontario. He will collaborate with the leadership team to identify and prioritize market opportunities and will monitor key performance indicators, develop business cases and interact with account managers, key customers and vendors.

Mouldale brings with him 15 years experience in business analysis, marketing strategy, new product and business development and sustained revenue growth and profitability. Most recently he served as Director of New Product Development for Black & Decker where he was responsible for international division strategies for new product categories. Previous to this he was the Canadian President for Interbath and Ontario Sales Manager for American Standard. Mouldale has also served seven years on the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating Regional Board of Directors, including one year as the Second Vice-President.

"I am excited about enhancing our relationships within Ontario's commercial segment," said Mouldale. "The marketplace is constantly changing and developing strong value-added relationships with our customers and vendor partners is a priority. My intentions are to strengthen our partnerships to mutually achieve objectives and have Wolseley become the partner of choice."
